FATHER DAVE

We have finished the four sessions evaluating our ministry to adolescents in religious education and experience. We have reached a position where we can now solicit response from the parents of our students. We have started to plan this for September, after the harvesting and the fair.

In the evaluation, we uncovered a thirst beyond adolescents, a need for adult catechesis and learning. I have started to pull together a group of adults to address adult needs in learning the Catholic faith. More and more people have come to realize that their Catholic education should not have stopped with high school graduation or marriage. Many have yearning for more. I shall charge this group with helping us supply more for adults.

I want to thank Tim Colbert and Jane Pierron, from our archdiocesan offices, Linda and Mike, from our staff, and all the teenagers and adults who have made the four sessions we have done happen and happen in a profitable manner.

LITURGY: SEVEN WEEK WITH EPHESIANS

We have seven weeks to explore the letter to the Ephesians, starting today and continuing to August 23. To explore in a homily does not mean to do a Bible study; it means to apply to our situations the teachings given to the people of the author's time. Most good scholars today believe that St Paul did not write the letter, but that it comes to us with his apostolic authority.

The letter has two major parts. The first gives a theological foundation of the mystery of salvation and of the Church. The second part draws some moral teachings based on the preceding. Good theology leads to good morals. A good moral life reflects a sound understanding of God and our relationship with God and others. I look forward to the letter to the Ephesians.
